SNEAK PREVIEW OF GORE VIDAL'S NEW COMEDY

Adapted from the Duerrenmatt drama of a cosmic pratfall

A MAJOR EXCERPT

The play is Romulus, Act One, Scene One. The curtain rises on the audience chamber and garden of the Emperor's villa. The audience chamber should be airy, nonrealistic, blending on three sides with a tangled garden of ilex trees and rose bushes gone wild. On the upstairs wall is a pediment supporting a dozen busts of past Emperors; they all look somewhat alarmed. The farthest bust, at stage right, is of the

FIRST NEWS OF THE 1962 BOAT-SHOW

New developments in outboards, inboards, water-jet propulsion, etc. Each year at mid-January, the Coliseum on Columbus Circle in New York becomes a mariner's mecca, and nautical types in all parts of the land face in that direction and mutter incantations to summer days of sun and breeze. This hallowed period comes during the annual run of

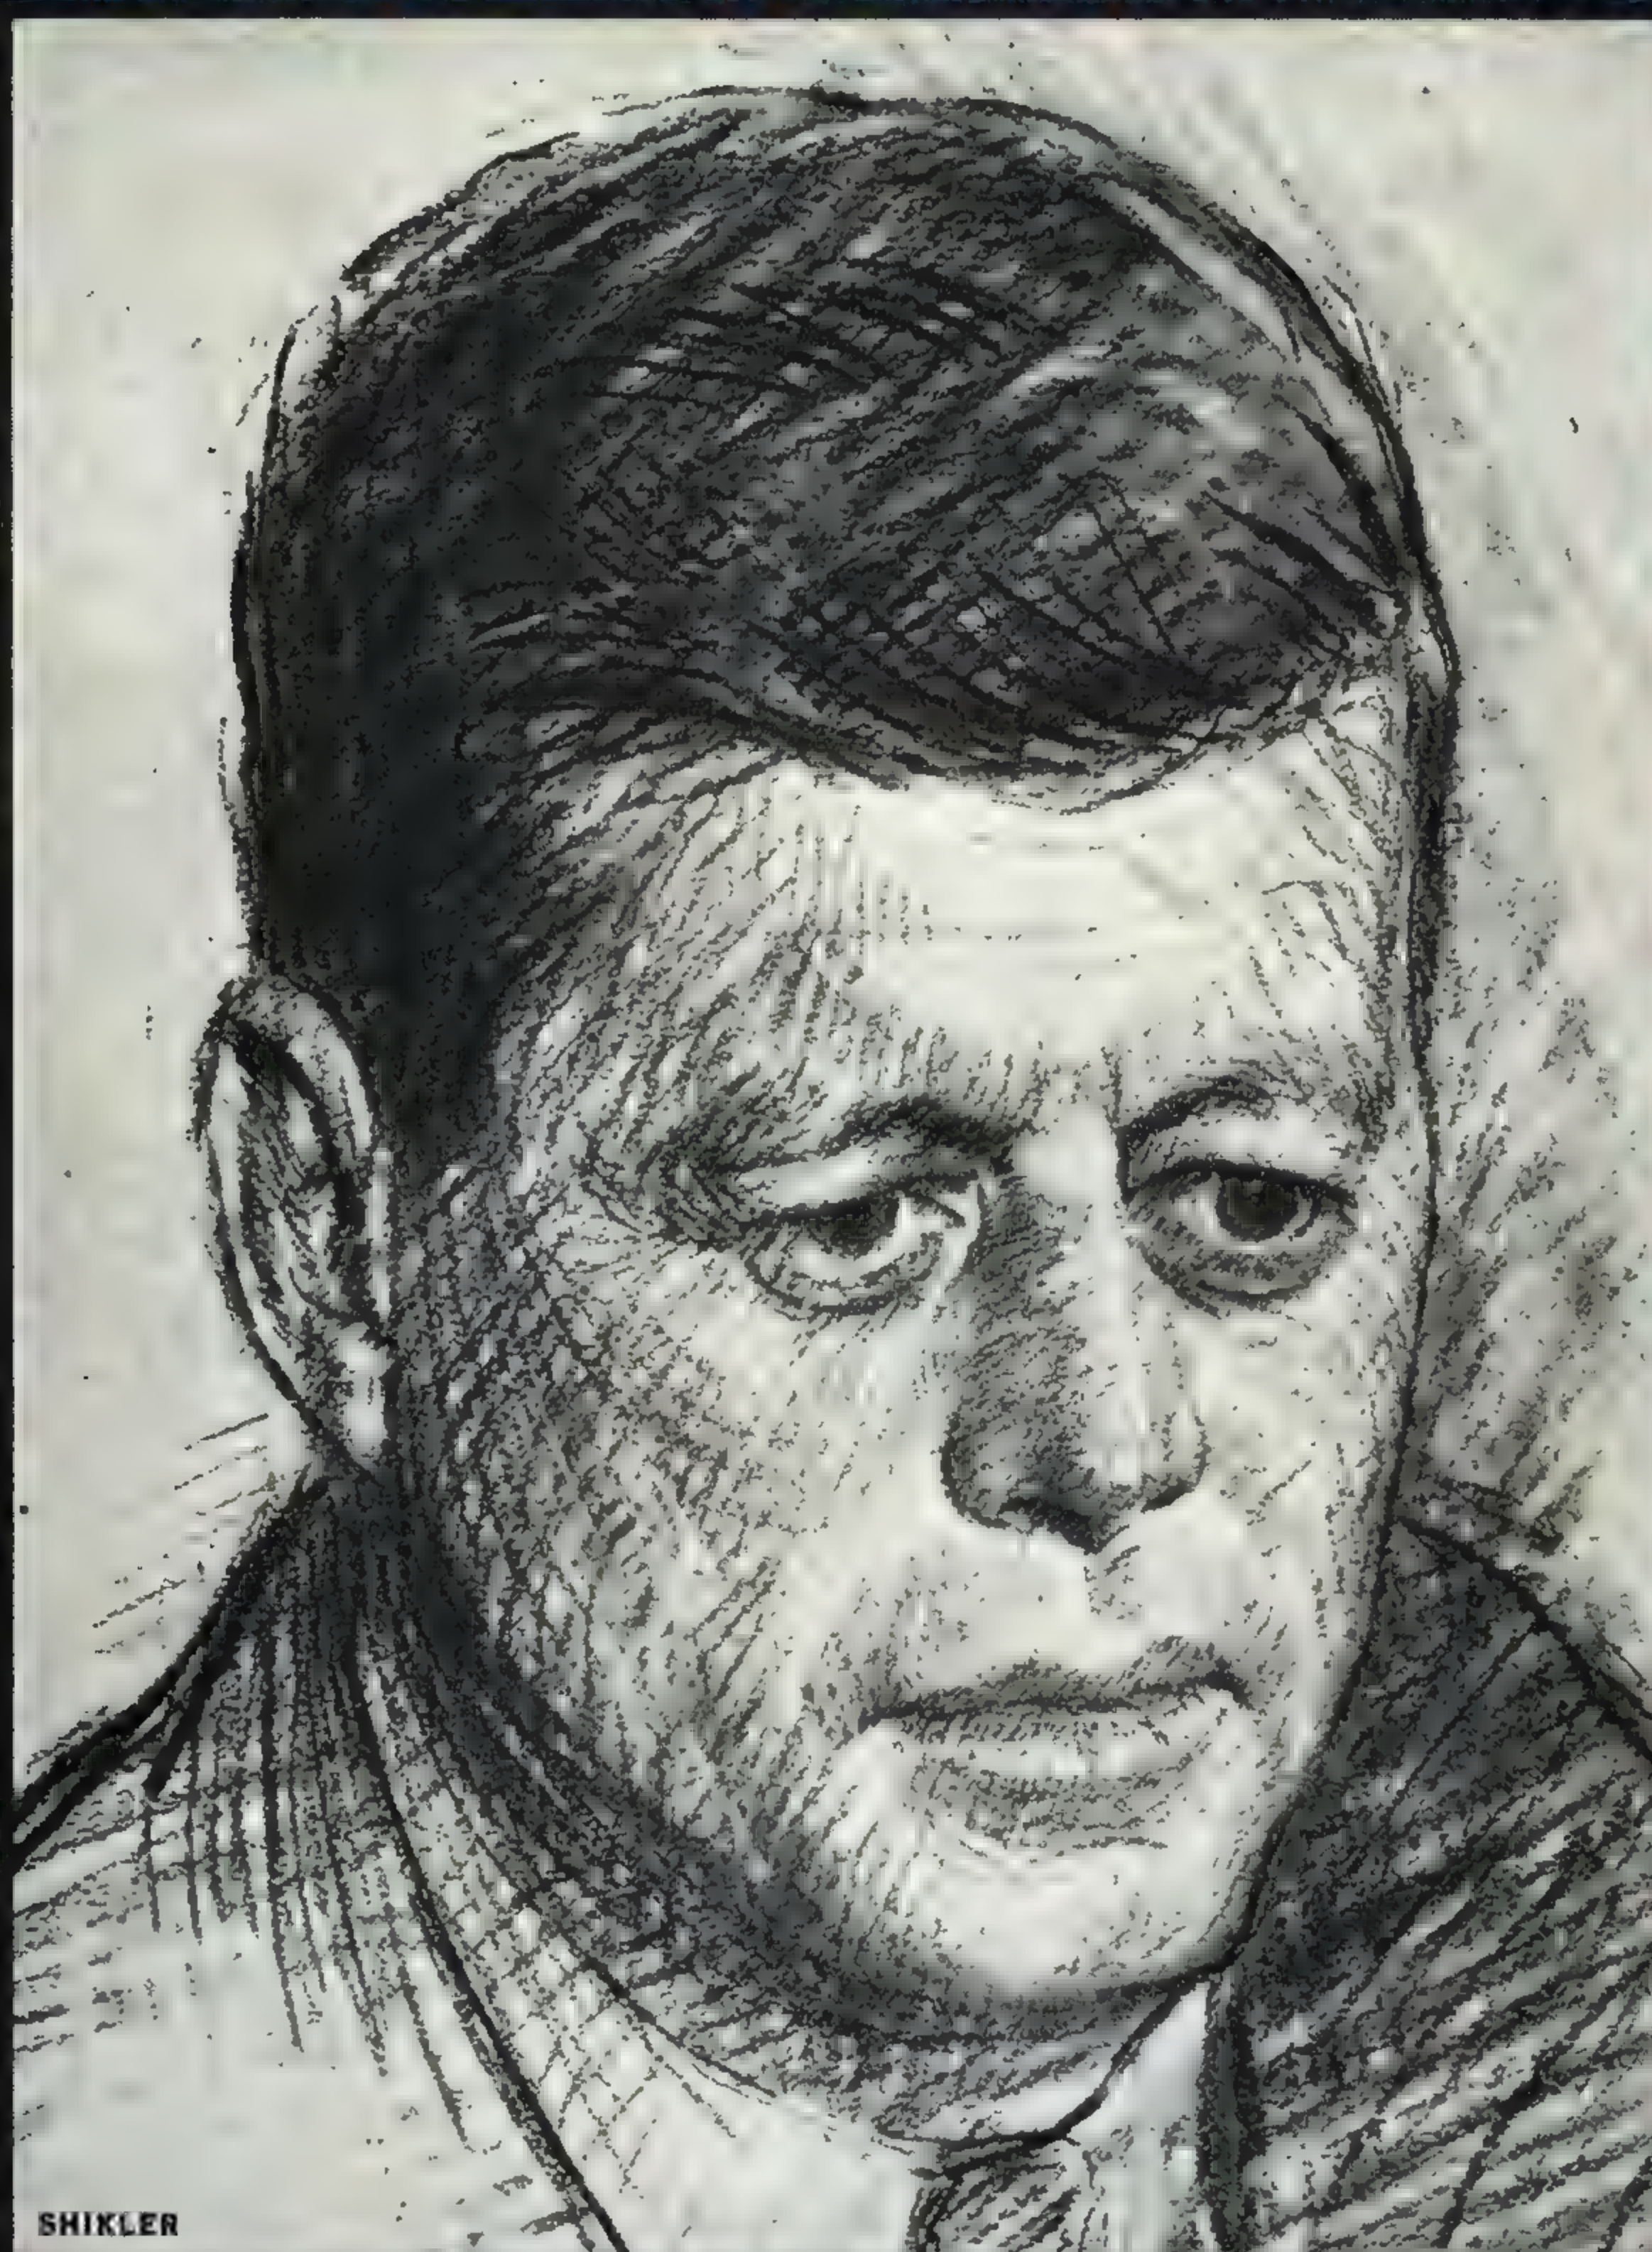

GREAT HEAVYWEIGHTS OF ALL TIME

The intense by Budd Schulberg white lights focused straight down upon the stage; a ring twenty-four-foot square set upon a raised platform for all the world to see. The pressure of sixty thousand light fans leaning, leering forward in the

9 PLACES IN THE WORLD TO HIDE

In the event of atomic war, there will be some areas of this world still habitable. The safest of these will be: Eureka, California; Cork, Ireland, and Guadalajara, Mexico, in the Northern Hemisphere. In the Southern Hemisphere: the Central Valley of Chile; Mendoza, Argentina; Belo Horizonte, Brazil; Melbourne, Australia; Christchurch, New Zealand; and Tananarive (continued inside)

THE WELL APPOINTED WARDROBE OF PRESIDENT JOHN F. KENNEDY

A photographic study of "The Kennedy Look", appraising the Presidential influence on men's fashions

The monogram on this man's shirt is JFK. The wearer, a precise man, is equally precise in the selection and tailoring of the clothes he wears. It is an art of good dress (and something of a paradox) to know how to wear clothes so that they call no attention to themselves yet suggest an immaculate taste. Despite his celebrated lack of ease with a hat, President Kennedy is a master of that art. Through the use of special photographs and a silhouette drawing, Esquire's Fashion Editor defines "The Kennedy Look," the growing new trend in men's fashions (continued inside)

PHILIP ROTH'S NEW NOVEL

First look at a special selection from an eagerly awaited work

She awoke like this: First the sheets, grainy; then the blanket, rough; under her lids a slow yellowing of light, on her lips a faint finger tip of sun. The first knowledge she had that day was that their room was swelling with a gleaming grey January light; however she kept her eyes closed to it, and she waited. Eyes closed there was no crippled chest of drawers across the way, no half-painted dresser, no dim mirror on the wall, no musty rug rolled up in the corner, no curled paint petals flaking off the ceiling onto the pillow. Only the knowledge that it was morning, a new day, and with it all the possibilities. Some mornings he touched her. Most mornings she touched him and then he touched her. This morning she was willing

THE CASE FOR THE WHITE SOUTHERNER

Can't any white man below the Mason-Dixon Line be any good?

When the good citizens of New Rochelle, New York, were accused last year of admitting Jim Crow to their schools, they denied it. When they were taken to court, they resisted. When the judge looked and saw old Jim sitting there plain as day and ordered his removal, a solid citizen of New Rochelle cried: "Nobody understands our situation." New Rochelle is located in the Piety Belt that denounces racial discrimination and has it, too. The law is against it but the majority of people are for it. Beginning in 1930, Judge Irvin R. Kaufman found, the New Rochelle school board had confined Negro pupils exclusively to one school. This was the Lincoln (continued inside)

How a Man Ages

*Good News and Bad
News About Getting Older*

Weight: He's fit now, but his metabolism's slowing. By fifty, he'll be twenty pounds heavier—and the fat may do him good.

Bones: Faster to break, slower to heal, his bones are losing calcium. All his flexing is just wearing down cartilage. Spry now, he'll be a stiffer man tomorrow.

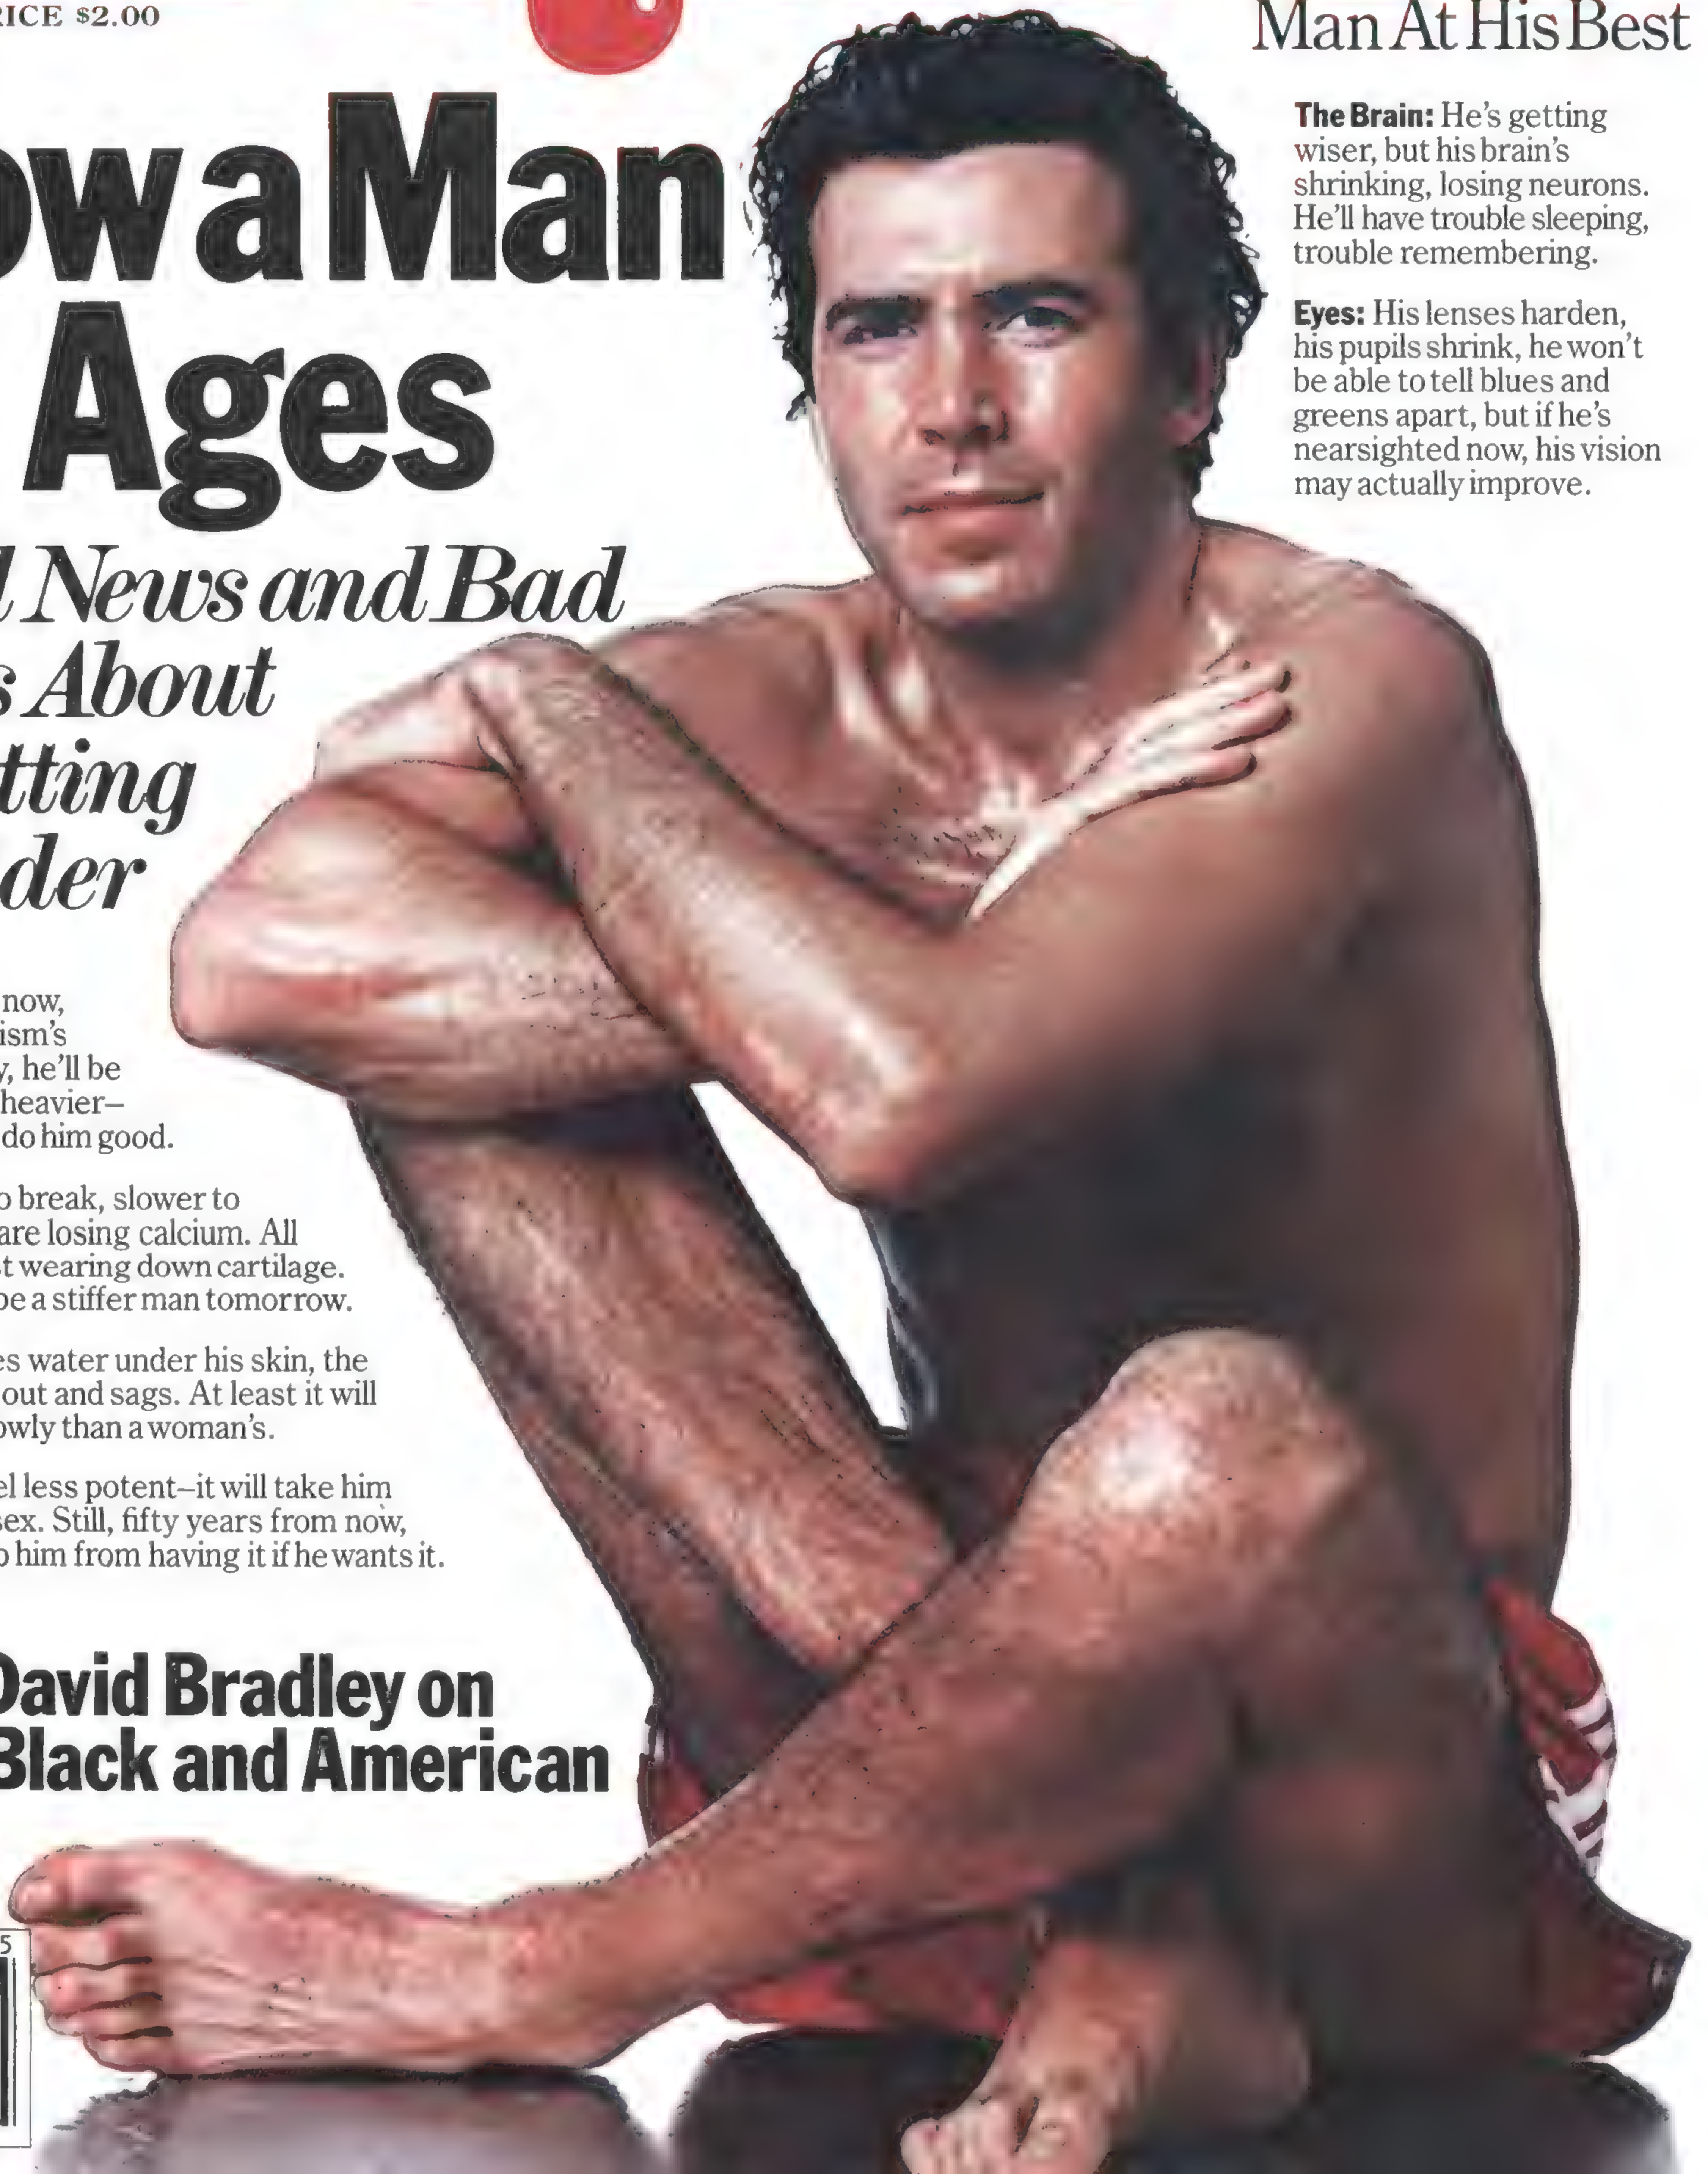

Skin: As he loses water under his skin, the dermis spreads out and sags. At least it will dry out more slowly than a woman's.

Sex: He may feel less potent—it will take him longer to have sex. Still, fifty years from now, nothing will stop him from having it if he wants it.

Plus: David Bradley on Being Black and American

The Brain: He's getting wiser, but his brain's shrinking, losing neurons. He'll have trouble sleeping, trouble remembering.

Eyes: His lenses harden, his pupils shrink, he won't be able to tell blues and greens apart, but if he's nearsighted now, his vision may actually improve.

$690,000

That's what advertisers coughed up for a Super Bowl commercial this year. Coming soon: the million-dollar minute.

$10,000,000

That's what terrible Ted Turner paid for the Atlanta Braves in 1976—steep for an also-ran but cheap for a TV series.

$35,000,000

That's how much small change ball-park vendors will take in at the twenty-six major-league fields this season.

$2,000,000,000

That's the value of the new five-year contract between Pete Rozelle's NFL and the networks.

$100,000,000

That's what taxpayers have paid to improve Yankee Stadium—a hefty subsidy for Steinbrenner.

$5,800,000

That's what every team in football received from TV each of the last four years—New Orleans Saints included.

How Champions Do It

An Insider's Guide to Olympic Excellence
by Charles Siebert

On the pommel horse, the gymnast must keep his hips out and his body in a straight line, like a long stick swinging from the shoulders. His basic move is a double leg circle, in which the gymnast swings both legs together in even circles above the horse, quickly displacing his hands each time his body sweeps through, to allow for an uninterrupted flow.
